DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claim 16 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being by Anderson et al (6,104,604).

Regarding claim 16, Anderson teaches of a computer user interface device (Fig. 5, reference character 300) for use by a user for communicating information to a computer (Fig. 5, reference character 400), the user interface device comprising a first module for producing a first set of user function signals based on user input operations (Fig. 3, reference character 310); a second module directly coupleable to said first module for producing a specialized set of user function signals based on user input operations (Fig. 2, reference character 200); and circuitry for coupling the first and second user function signals to the computer (Fig. 3, reference character 350).

Allowable Subject Matter

3. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: Claims 1-15 are allowable since certain key features of the claimed invention are not taught or fairly suggested by the prior art. In claim 1, the circuitry for coupling both the keyboard and the specialized user function signals to the computer is "on the specialized module". The closest prior art, Anderson (see above) teaches of a keyboard module and a specialized module, however singularly or in combination fails to anticipate or render the above underlined limitations obvious.
